Is Land Tax damaging your business? Help VACC send a message to government about land tax

Dear Member

Recently VACC has received reports from some members outlining the devastating impact that rising land tax is having on their businesses.

Under the Andrews Government, land taxes have more than doubled over the last five years - up by 109 per cent. In many cases, land tax bills have soared between 50 and 100 per cent in one year.

Property taxes not only hurt individuals and families in the community, but they also hurt small businesses. This places businesses under enormous pressure, jeopardising the on-going viability of many long-standing businesses and their employees.

VACC is seeking to collect information more broadly from members regarding the impact of rising land tax at the business level. This information will help formulate a response to the Victorian Government by VACC, with the aim of raising awareness of the immediate and wider repercussions affecting businesses and the community and the need for relief.

To this extent, VACC requests your assistance in completing a very short survey on land tax. The survey only takes two minutes to complete.

No personal details or business details are gathered in the survey, and all responses remain strictly confidential.

The survey can be accessed through this link:

Could you please complete the survey by Friday, 13 September 2019.

Your assistance is greatly appreciated.

Kind regards
